STRUB receives valuable ISO 21469 certification from NSF for adhering to the highest standards of hygiene for the production of food grade lubricants

The food, beverage, packaging, cosmetics and pharmaceutical industries place very high demands on safety, cleanliness and reliability when using lubricants. Essential for machines and systems is the right choice of lubricant. Also, performance and continuity can be heavily influenced by lubricants.

Strub manufactures a comprehensive range of lubricants for all applications in the food, beverage, packaging, cosmetics and pharmaceutical industries. Strub's products are registered with the NSF and the company was certified to ISO 21469 in 2018. With ISO 21469 certification, Strub helps its customers in the food, beverage, packaging, cosmetics and pharmaceutical industries comply with the stringent cleanliness and hygiene requirements of these industries. The company implemented the Hazard Analysis and Critical Control Points concept (HACCP). This forms an integral part of the quality and hygiene management systems according to ISO 9001 and ISO 21469.

Certification to ISO 21469 confirms that Strub critically reviews the entire value chain. This includes the procurement of raw materials, the maintenance of formulations, production and storage, with logistics also playing a central role. Highest priority in the use of lubricants in the food, beverage, packaging, cosmetics and pharmaceutical industries is that there is no contamination of the products. The aim is to avoid the risk of contamination with the products and therefore it is important to bring only the necessary amount of lubricant to the lubrication point. Strub checks every system before the application and determines the exact lubricant requirement. This check provides an individual lubrication schedule for each asset with the risks.
